

CHOOSING A MAJOR- Tip Sheet

The career development process includes a series of choices. Choosing a major is just one decision you will make throughout the process. For a complete list of majors and minors offered at RMU, please refer to the website, www.rmu.edu, and click on “Academics” > “Degrees & Majors” > “Undergraduate.”

RESEARCHING YOU

In order to know what you want in terms of a major or career, you must first know yourself. This requirement may sound easy, but you will need to devote time to be able to clearly identify your interests, skills and values.

A. Identifying Interests

When choosing a major, it is important to identify your interests. What do you like to do?

- Meet with your career coach to take an interest inventory. No inventory or person can tell you what to do, but discussing the results of an interest inventory with your coach will likely help you identify your interests and how they relate to the world of work. Your career coach can facilitate the process of exploring academic majors and career options.
- Make a list of hobbies or activities that you enjoy now or enjoyed when you were younger. What types of things do you lose track of time while working on?
- Make a list of courses you enjoyed most in high school.
- Ask family members and close friends what they view as your greatest interests.

B. Evaluating Skills

Whether choosing a major or career, you need to evaluate your abilities and skills. Each major and job requires certain skills that are needed in order to succeed.

- To begin evaluating your skills, consider the following questions:
  - What were my best subjects/classes in high school?
  - What classes have I done well in so far in college?
  - What skills have I used in previous jobs, volunteer experiences or extracurricular activities?
- Meet with your career coach to discuss your current skills and those you might like to develop.

C. Prioritizing Values

Understanding your values will help you narrow down career choices and lead to increased career satisfaction. Values are deeply held convictions that influence your thinking when faced with choices. They provide a frame of reference for evaluating information and weighing options. Values are also motivators that reflect what you consider most important in your life. For example, consider what is most important to you: the type of work you perform, the location or work setting, working conditions, rewards of work, etc.

- Meet with your career coach to complete a values exercise and/or to discuss how your values relate to careers.
- Explore online resources such as the following:
  - O*NET OnLine: www.onetonline.org/find/descriptor/browse/Work\_Values
  - Work Values Checklist: www.monster.com/career-advice/article/work-values-check-list

RESEARCHING INFORMATION

Research information about the major(s) that interest you and related careers.

Websites:

Career Guides by Major: www.rmu.edu/careercenter

Click on “Students > Resources > Career Resource Guides” to locate a great starting place to research majors and related career information.

careeronestop: www.careeronestop.org

Sponsored by the U.S. Department of Labor, this site provides information on career exploration, training and jobs. It also features videos that show the types of work people do in nearly 550 careers. To access the videos, click on “Explore Careers > Video Library > Career and Cluster Videos.”

Checksheets: www.rmu.edu

Review checksheets for every major that interests you. From the University home page, click on “Academics,” “Degrees & Majors,” “Undergraduate” and then “Concentrations.” Read through course requirements and descriptions. Which courses sound interesting? Which are you excited to take? Which courses do not sound appealing?

Occupational Outlook Handbook: www.bls.gov/ooh

Compiled by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, this source of career information provides the opportunity to search by occupation or occupation group. Information includes typical duties, work environment, educational requirements, national wages, job outlook, employment and wage data by state, and links to similar occupations.

O*NET OnLine: www.onetonline.org

This database, developed for the U.S. Department of Labor by the National Center for O*NET Development, includes information on over 900 occupations. Research occupations using keywords, or by a variety of categories including Bright Outlook, Career Cluster, Green Economy Sector, Industry, Job Family, Job Zone and STEM Discipline. You may also search by interests, skills and values.

Books:

- Visit the Career Library to browse books that provide information on career options for majors of interest. The Career Library is located in the Career and Professional Development Center (Benjamin Rush Center).
- Go to the bookstore and look through text books for majors that interest you. Skim through the table of contents. Do you seem excited about the topics? Could you imagine yourself studying the materials for a semester or multiple semesters?

Networking:

- Talk with a faculty advisor in the major(s) that interest you to learn more.
- Talk with upper-class students in majors that interest you. Ask faculty advisors or your career coach for suggestions.
- Search LinkedIn (www.linkedin.com) to find alumni who have graduated from majors that interest you. Join the Robert Morris University Career Network, a LinkedIn group that provides an opportunity for RMU students, alumni, faculty and staff to connect with each other about career-related topics (<http://tinyurl.com/cxqtfk3>). Ask alumni about skills they learned in their major and how those skills relate to their current job, what a typical day is like at their job, most/least favorite parts of their job, etc.

TESTING OUT OPTIONS & MAKING DECISIONS

- Look at the class schedule for the semester and identify classes that look interesting to you. Contact the professor for the class and ask if you could observe a class.
- Join related clubs and organizations.
- To test out career interests, consider the following:
  - Informational Interviews
  - Shadowing
  - Volunteering
  - Part-time Jobs
  - Work-Study Positions (Student Employment Program)
  - Internships

As you gain more information and engage in different experiences, you will need to continually re-evaluate your choices and plans. Please remember that the Career and Professional Development Center (CPDC) staff is available to assist you at any step along the way. To schedule an appointment with your career coach, contact the CPDC at 412-397-6333.
